

Wheels: Roger asked, "I am looking for a used car. I found a 2005 model that has 41 miles on the odometer. It has been sitting in a garage since December 2004. Nothing was done to prepare the car for storage. It was not driven during this "storage" period. Are there any concerns I should have about a car like this?"

Halderman: I think the gasoline will be your biggest concern. The life of gasoline is about 90 days unless it has been treated, which I doubt was done. What to do? I suggest that you fill the tank using gas cans with fresh gasoline and then start the vehicle and let it run for several hours to get it up to operating temperature to get as much of the old fuel as possible through the system.
