

Wheels: What is considered to be abnormal oil consumption?

Halderman: According to most service information, excessive oil consumption is when the engine uses more than one quart every 600 miles to 1,000 miles, depending on the exact vehicle information. In other words, it is normal for many engines to use oil in normal service without anything being wrong or excessively worn in the engine.

