

Wheels: Does the switching from the use of carburetors to fuel injection and oil quality the only things that have changed?

Halderman: No. Over the past twenty years, the price of oil has increased as well as wages, resulting in higher priced oil changes. If the oil does not need to be changed every three months due to changes in engine and oil, it makes good economic sense not to waste oil and money.

